Pride Community Center Applauds Gainesville Voters for Saying No to Discrimination

Voters rejected the discriminatory ballot measure by a 58 percent to 42 percent margin. Charter Amendment 1 would have removed Gainesville’s existing nondiscrimination protections for lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender people, some of which have been in place for more than a decade.

For nearly a year, supporters of Charter Amendment 1 waged a fear-based campaign that blatantly lied to voters about the intent and impact of Charter Amendment 1 and specifically targeted transgender people with harmful discrimination. The sweeping language of the ballot initiative, which was written by a far right conservative group in Michigan, would have prohibited the City of Gainesville from providing nondiscrimination protections beyond the minimal protections set forth in the Florida Civil Rights Act.

Pride Community Center of North Central Florida would like to thank the voters of Gainesville for standing up for the rights of the gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender citizens of Gainesville.

By turning out in record numbers to defeat Charter Amendment 1, the citizens of Gainesville said no to discrimination and confirmed that Gainesville will not be intimidated by outrageous scare tactics and divisive politics.

The transgender community undoubtedly faces discrimination and huge barriers to public acceptance. But Gainesville voters stood up and said we are going to support the anti-discrimination laws that protect these members of our community. Gainesville is truly a great place to live.

“Gainesville voters showed that they value the rights of all citizens,” said EQGB Chair and Gainesville City Commissioner Craig Lowe. “They rejected the politics of fear and instead chose to retain the values that make our city such a beautiful place.”
